In 2008, CTCAC implemented a threshold basis limit system utilizing county and regional cost data. This data, obtained from the California Tax Credit Allocation Committee (CTCAC) database, consists of new construction projects that have been awarded tax credits. CTCAC is releasing 2023 threshold basis limits using an updated data set, and the following summarizes steps taken to update this data.

In updating the limits each year, CTCAC adds newly awarded projects to the data set and deletes the oldest year of project data. CTCAC staff has added data for projects receiving 2022 tax credit reservations (both 9% and 4%). Staff uses application estimates for a given project until CTCAC receives a final certified project cost report. Continuing this year, competitive project costs have been updated with interim cost estimates from the 180/194-day application submissions. To more accurately reflect the higher construction costs of recent years, the current data set consists of a five-year period of projects awarded from 2018-2022 and uses a region-level basis limit.

The methodology remains unchanged from last year's, and with the input of 2022 new construction data along with the 2023 R.S. Means Historical Cost Index and City Cost Indexes construction inflators, the result was a relative increase in the basis limits across the board for each corresponding region.

CTCAC basis limits are restricted to the project data gathered from CTCAC application submissions.
